FLOOD SWEEPS THE ARKANSAS VALLEY

TOWNS OF ENGLAND AND ALTHEIMER IN RIVER'S PATH

The Flood Area Extends Over Arkansas, Missouri and Mississippi With Lesser Areas Indundated In Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Louisiana—Widespread Distress and Ruin Mark the Fair Valley Which Drains Nearly One-Third of This Country.

The old Mississippi river dyke on which 300 men have been laboring for two days in an effort to stave off the attacks of the Arkansas river, went out Monday afternoon. The towns of England and Altheimer are in the path of the river and the water if expected to spread for 60 miles south of Keat.

The breaking of the Plum Bayou levee, which sent its waters surging into the old river dyke which gave way Monday night will probably flood 400,000 acres of rich farming land. Already 115 families have been driven from their homes in this immediate section.

Only a temporary levee protects England now and that is expected to go with a predicted rise Tuesday.

Heavy with the flood waters of two-fifths of the total area of continental United States, the Mississippi river and its tributaries hammered incessantly at the levees man has built to reclaim hundreds of square miles of fertile soil.

Thruout their length, man and machine continued to pile sand bags and construct emergency revetments on the dykes to protect the flood plains extending at an average width of 50 miles from the river ridge built by deposits thru the centuries.

Widespread distress and extensive ruin mark the places where the river has overcome its artificial bounds and laid claim to uncounted thousands of acres of land.

Spreading widely over Missouri, Arkansas and Mississippi, with lesser areas inundated in Illinois, Kentucky Tennessee and Louisiana, the flood has driven an estimated 25,000 persons from their homes and wrought material ruin, expected to mount into the millions of dollars.

Upward of a dozen lives have been lost. Most disheartening to the refugees atop levees or in camps that dot the valley, are the upward revisions of flood stages issued by the weather bureau.

At Fort Smith, Arkansas, where the Arkansas enters the state of her name, new rises were registered and official predictions said new floods probably would break all records with a stage of 37 to 38 feet.

The city faces a shortage of drinking water. Elsewhere in the state, where the worst conditions prevail, the Arkansas, White and St. Francis rivers have broken thru in a dozen places.

"The levees are holding." This word, coming from tired engineers along the main artery, has been insufficient assurance to the residents behind the levees and while the women and children move to higher ground, the men, their farms now lakes, concentrate upon strengthening the earthen embankments against a flood, said by the weather bureau to be the greatest in history.

The most serious situation on the Mississippi river north of Vicksburg Monday night appeared to be at Knowlton, Arkansas, just above Laconia landing. Residents sent out a cry of distress Monday and a government boat was sent to pick them up before the impending breach there should occur.

river in the delta or stood guard against possible attempts to ease the pressure on one side by dynamiting the other. Along a front from the more northern points in Mississippi and Louisiana to below New Orleans the work went on while the river cut shallow gashes in new levees, brought a sand boil to the back of a levee, or sent seepage bubbling thru sudden lowlands.

One man was reported shot near Poydras, below New Orleans, Monday night by levee guards. A break occurred at Poydras during the 1922 high water and armed guards are patrolling the levees. Four men approached the levee in a skiff, the report said, and when they failed to respond to the guard's challenge they were fired upon. There was a scream and the boat moved away. Residents had been warned not to approach the levees after dark.

STATE AWARD PAID FAMILIES POISON DEATHS

Damage awards totaling $19,000 growing out of the death of two Ohio State university students and permanent injury of two others in the strychnine poisoning at the university two years ago were recommended by the state sundry claims boards Monday.

Awards of $7500 each were voted to the families of Charles H. Huls, Logan and Louis Puskin, Canton, the two students who died as a result of taking poison dispensed as medicine from the university dispensary. The board allowed $2500 to Delbert Thompson, Canton and $1500 to Timothy McCarthy, Fremont, who were made seriously ill by the poison, and whose health was permanently impaired as a result.

Before the claims are paid, the recommendations of the board must be ratified by action of the general assembly and signed by the governor. Finance Director Wilbur B. Baker, Governor Donahey's representative on the board, held out for an award of $6,500 each in the two deaths, the maximum amount allowed by the industrial commission in cases of accidental death.

The board added $1000 to this amount in each case to help pay the cost of the students' education.

GOVERNOR VETOES THREE SIGNS ELEVEN

Bills, Weak School Districts Can Borrow Money in Anticipation of State Aid.

Three bills were vetoed, 11 were signed and one will be permitted to become a law without signature, it was announced Monday by Governor Donahey.

Bills vetoed included the Roberts bill to increase salaries of county commissioners and bar them from fees or per diem now collected, the Marshall bill proposing to increase salary of the chaplain from $1500 to $2500 per year and the Abele bill to authorize theft insurance for funds of securities in custody of the county treasurer.

Jones bill authorizing weak school districts to borrow money in anticipation of state aid which has been appropriated by the general assembly will be permitted to become a law without his signature, the governor said, his objection being that the measure was passed as an emergency.

The governor still has 10 bills passed by the legislature on his desk awaiting action, while 29 bills passed by both houses have not come to him for action yet.

Three of the bills signed bore names of legislators elected from Columbus. Two grade crossings in Columbus will be eliminated as a result of the enactment of the Ward bill granting to the Pennsylvania railroad company a strip of land alongside the state fair grounds for a new overhead right-of-way in place of the present grade-level tracks. It was introduced by Representative Grant P. Ward, Republican, Columbus.

Under terms of the Herbert bill, introduced by Senator Paul M. Herbert, Republican, Columbus, transfer of property of one religious or charitable organization to another will be possible by vote of two-thirds of the members of the organization.

McKinley bill, introduced by Representative Jerry S. McKinley, Republican, Columbus, provides that in case of retrenchments in public service, the youngest in point of service shall be retired first, while in case of enlargement of service, those thus laid off shall be reappointed first, in order of service, the oldest first.

Among other bills signed were the Morgan bill repealing (10-2) obsolete and unconstitutional sections of the general code and the Norton-Rohr bill appropriating $150,000 for construction in France and Belgium of memorials to the Thirty-seventh Division in the war.

Others signed included: The Walther bill to require motor vehicles containing explosives to come to full stop at railroad grade crossings.

The Stevens bill authorizing the sale to Dayton of Mad river feeder canals in Dayton to aid in that city's grade crossing program.

The Shafer-Burnett bill to provide additional relief to needy blind persons.

The Meyers bill to permit the Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas Co., to construct a pipe line across a section of state property in Lucas county.

The Johnson bill to permit county commissioners to give surety company bonds instead of bonds signed by two property owners.

The Norton-Bender bill to authorize boards of education to contract with private organizations for special instruction in school work.

HOW FAKE AUCTIONS GET YOUR MONEY

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association
(This is one of a series of articles exposing the wiles of sharpers who are after your money.)

NEARLY everyone is ready "to take a fling" at getting something for nothing or at least for less than it is worth. Because of this many are duped into paying more than regular market prices for things they buy. This class of people is especially susceptible to the appeal of anything resembling an auction. Fake auctions with the cards stacked against the buyer are very common. They rank high among the fraudulent schemes of the country.

The "here today and gone tomorrow" auction faker rents a fine looking house in some high-class section of the city in which he plans to operate. He furnishes this house with the cheapest imitations of high-class furnishings, with here and there a fine piece which is to serve for bait. Certain pieces are alleged antiques with a thread of glorious history behind them. Of others it is claimed that they have been handed down for generations, originating with some person noted in history or with some famous Southern family. Of other pieces it is maintained that they are made of rare and precious woods imported from far across the sea. The overstuffed furniture, it is claimed, is all high grade of standard manufacture.

Regardless of its superiority and antiquity, the furniture must be sold at once, for the owner is compelled to take an extended trip, the family physician having ordered travel and a change of climate as a means of saving his life. Nothing is to be spared and the deep slashings of the auctioneer's axe must go on with no price too low. Individual pre-auction sales, of course, will be arranged for persons who are unable to attend the auction. The day of the sale is here. Purchasers are arriving. They are met at the door by the woman member of the outfit—a dramatic person who knows when to shed tears at the thought of having her happy home broken up and her valuable furnishings

ings torn from her. She tells her sad story—how she must leave her home and go to distant lands with her husband whose health is broken and life in danger. But she is resigned to her "awful calamity" and will sell all her lovely furniture even at a great sacrifice.

As she directs attention to certain pieces of furniture her voice quavers. She almost sobs aloud as she names the price she is forced to accept. "Less than half the original cost, but price is no object. We must take the train tomorrow," and she wipes a tear from her eye. Fully convinced the sale is genuine, and sympathizing with the unfortunate woman, buyers clamor for the furniture.

But no sooner are the articles transferred from their setting in the slightly darkened rooms of their original owner and displayed in the sunlight of the purchaser's home, than the truth about the sale begins to dawn in the mind of each new owner. Close examination reveals that evidently this wonderful collection of furniture was but odds and ends and unsalable pieces picked up from second-hand stores by these fly-by-night fakers. Some proves to be the rankest of imitations of the cheapest grade, and the overstuffed is so poorly constructed that it squeaks and weaves under the lightest weight.

The Birds Have Flown

When those who have been cheated rush back to the house the next day, intent on making it "hot for the faker,"

(A future article will present means to foil crooked promoters' wiles and tell how to separate good from bad investments.)

TRUST COMPANIES RANK NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING HIGHEST

The outstanding trust institutions of the United States are those that were pioneers in using advertising as a means of selling their services, a speaker told a conference of trust companies held in New York recently. He presented the results of a questionnaire sent out by the Trust Company Division, American Bankers Association, making an inquiry into the advertising practices of institutions doing a trust business. Three out of every four trust companies and banks engaged in extending trust services were found to be advertising. The opinion was expressed by the speaker that their growth would closely follow the amounts spent each year for advertising.

The local newspaper is the most highly regarded advertising medium, it was disclosed. In all, 929 companies answering the questionnaire used the local papers and 338 did not. The institutions buying space in local papers are evenly divided among all sections of the country. Comparing six media for selling personal trust services and considering their effectiveness from the standpoint of producing results, the speaker declared that the local newspapers should head the list. Folders and booklets can reach a limited audience, he observed, but the newspaper is the best medium for acquiring prestige and mass circulation. It should never be omitted, he urged.

UNIDENTIFIED PERSON PHONES OF KILLING

Body of Mingo Man Found By Coroner on Highway Following Mysterious Call.

Urbana, April 16.—A mysterious Easter eve tragedy occurred near here tonight when Coroner I. W. Armprister received an unidentified telephone call telling him he would find a dead man on a highway near here.

Hurriedly driven to the named location, seven miles north of Urbana, the coroner found the body of Frederick P. Stevenson, aged 23, of Mingo, near the edge of the highway and an overturned automobile in the center of the road.

Coroner Armprister said he believed it was a case of a "hit and run" accident—the guilty party evidently afraid to face justice after the fatal accident—but his conscience so preyed on him that he telephoned authorities nevertheless.

Stevenson's wife is in Lima. He recently returned here from Arizona, where he had gone for his health.

Coroner Armprister said his telephone communicant immediately left the wire after telling him he would find the body and he did not learn his name.

The young man was a grand-nephew of the late Job E. Stevenson.

BODY OF CHINESE

Who Died In War Camp To Be Returned To China.

Cincinnati, April 17.—After resting for nine years in American soil while his relatives in China stinted and saved, the flag-draped body of Private Sam Pong will be one of 200 dead Chinese to be returned to their mother country.

In accordance with ancient Chinese customs the dead of China are always returned to native soil, but in that land of small wages it often requires years of saving before enough money is accumulated to pay the transportation cost. This shipment of bodies will be assembled in New York.

Sam Pong was 27 when he answered America's call during the World War, but influenza cheated him at Camp Sherman in 1918. His body goes to a village near Canton where his relatives live.

Sam Pong was a former laundryman of this city, being located in the old Melvin block now the Crist block, occupied by Clark's 5 & 10 c Store.

AMERICAN

Forest Week Arbor Day Literature May Be Secured From State Forester.

The President of the United States has designated April 24 to 30 as American Forest Week, and urges that during this week the American people give serious thought to the enormous losses of timber by fires, and the necessity of the wise and economical use of our forest resources.

The Governor of Ohio has also asked for special observance of this week, and has set aside Friday, April 29 as Arbor Day for Ohio.

It is urged that special exercises be held in the schools and among various civic organizations, and that the general public give consideration to the forest needs of their respective communities.

The President urges the reforestation of idle lands, and states that one-fourth of our soil is better suited for timber growing than any other purpose, and expresses the view that our industrial and agricultural stability will be strengthened by bringing into full productive use the lands that are now lying waste.

There are at least a million acres of idle and low grade agricultural lands in Ohio that should be returned to the forest. Most of this land is contained in the farms of the State. Owners may now obtain trees for restocking idle areas from the State nurseries. It is obviously more profitable to have idle land in growing forests than to permit it to remain unproductive.

Literature suitable for American Forest Week may be obtained from the State Forester, at Wooster, Ohio.

HIGHWAY LIGHTS

Perhaps the most pregnant scheme for increasing the cost of government which has been fostered in recent years is the proposal for lighting highways in the country at night, as suggested in bills introduced in the General Assembly and now pending.

The possibilities of the proposition are set forth in one section of the bill by Senator Frank C. Wise, Stark County, which asserts that there shall not be more than 100 lights for each 200,000 of population in the state. Now, let's see. There are 6,000,000 people in Ohio, so that under the ration proposed, 30 times 100 lights are proposed, making 3,000 lights on the state system of 11,000 miles. As many miles are in cities and municipalities already lighted one may count off 1,000 miles and reduce the ratio to 3,000 lights for 10,000 miles, or three to a mile. These are to be placed at dangerous crossings, curves and railway tracks. That's something for the light salesmen, who have sold virtually all of the traffic lights that the small cities and villages can stand. One may guess they are hungry for more business. But the good things in the Wise bill do not stop here. There are the county roads, too, and here 100 lights would be given to each 100,000 of population. Granted that the County Commissioners can be persuaded, there is a possible sale here for 6,000 lights, so that the farther one goes in the bill the better it gets, like the packs of the old-fashioned peddlers. Now, as a matter of fact, these lights in general are little more than a nuisance, as every night driver knows. The modern car makes its own light and the dangerous places on Ohio roads are marked by a good system of signs. Accidents, save for defective mechanism and recklessness, need not occur. Nor does any one see a substantial need for subsidizing the electric light companies. They seem to be struggling along without outside help.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Peter Rabbit had slept a long time. Now his hair had grown so long that nobody knew him. He saw passing by an old, old man, weak and tottery, a younger-looking one with rheumy eyes and shaking legs, and another who looked a trifle less ancient.

"I am—eh-heh-heh!—Farmer Brown," said the first old man. "This is my son, Farmer Brown's boy, John, whom you may have seen, and here is his son, Farmer Brown's grandson, Dem-john, of whom you have never heard before."

And they went tottering down the hill, leaving Peter Rabbit considerably interested.—Kansas City Star.

Brunettes Preferred by Dixie Collegians

Atlanta, Ga.—Brunettes—ones with freckles—are preferred at Oglethorpe university.

Helen Nort, eighteen, a freckled-faced coed, and Luther Marchand Davenport, are the most beautiful girl and most handsome man, respectively, at the school, having been elected over numerous students in a contest conducted by the Lords club.

Last year Miss Nort was selected over several thousand girls as the most beautiful in the Atlanta girls' high school. She has no scruples against bobbed hair, but is letting her tresses grow long again. She likes dancing and tennis and wants to become a commercial artist.

As for Davenport, nineteen, who hails from Greer, S. C., and is tall and slender, he declines comment other than the "election is a pretty good joke on me."

BRITON IN REGION

TROD BY ALEXANDER

Seeks to Trace Route of Great Conqueror.

In an endeavor to trace the route followed by Alexander the Great when he invaded India, the English explorer, Sir Aurel Stein, has succeeded in penetrating a region untrod by Europeans since Alexander's army swept into it more than 2,200 years ago.

Sir Aurel Stein's achievement, which was beset with perils, crowned efforts extending over more than 20 years. He has just divulged the first part of the record of his hazardous trip, which was undertaken on behalf of the Indian archeological survey and with the sanction of the government of India, says the New York Times.

It took him to a hitherto unvisited tract of territory beyond the present northwestern frontier of India through which, according to him, Alexander must have marched in 327 and 326 B. C. when on his way from Kabul river to invade the Punjab.

The first part of Sir Aurel's description is taken up largely with his earlier efforts to penetrate this forbidden land. Though he had tried for a long time previously it was not until 1904 that he succeeded in penetrating part of it and in being the first European to ascend Mount Mahabhan Peak, which he hoped—in vain—to identify with a mountain mentioned in the ancient chronicle of Alexander's Indian campaign.

He continued his investigations in 1906, visiting territory which he felt assured was traversed by the Macedonian army. Further research, however, was prevented at that time by the fact that the bulk of the region was still inaccessible to Europeans. Sir Aurel kept up his efforts, nevertheless, until in 1921 he again visited the dangerous unknown frontier territories, but he failed to reach the area, along the Indus which he believed Alexander had traversed, because the Pathan tribes there were engaged in deadly feuds, making the journey altogether too perilous for a European. Finally the frontier region which he wished to visit came under the sway of a strong ruler, a grandson, by the way, of that Akhond of Swat made famous years ago in a poem by the American poet Lanigan. Aided by this potentate and the British Indian authorities, Sir Aurel Stein was enabled to explore what he terms the "fascinating region" which before had been closed to research.

"Why mamma, I got nails on me—finger nails."—Indianapolis News.

Relics of Bronze Age

While widening a road near London, England, workmen disclosed a circular area, obviously artificial, covered by a setting of rough stones. After measurements had been taken it became clear that the remains were the foundation of a round cairn of the Bronze age, probably some 4,000 years old, and long ante-dating the Roman fort situated a few hundred yards to the southeast.

Believed Site of Mizpah

Broken statuettes of the Babylonian goddess Astarte against whose worship the prophet Jeremiah warned the Israelites, have been found by excavators at Tell-en-Nasbeth, a mound situated on a hill seven miles north of Jerusalem. The excavators are convinced they have discovered the site of the Mizpah of Benjamin, one of the greatest and most heavily fortified citadels of pre-Exile days.

Crow Lost Its Prey

Startled by a peculiar noise, Mrs. James Hennessey of Hillsboro, N. H., looked out of the window just in time to see a crow flying low with a partridge clutched tightly in its talons. Mr. Hennessey gave chase, and the bird, hampered with the weight of the partridge, dropped it and escaped. The partridge soon died, however.

Water Damage

John A. and Sarah Graffis have filed a civil action in common pleas court against John M. Doerring in which they ask for equitable relief and damages in the sum of $200. S. T. Ruggles has filed a civil action against Sturm & Dillard, Chesapeake & Hocking railway construction company in which they ask for damages in the sum of $5,000. Claiming the defendants have allowed water to enter the basement of the plaintiff's building at Canal street, Barton Walters represents the plaintiff.

Released on Habeas Corpus.

Probate Judge J. W. Adkins Monday morning decided the cases of Frank Jenkins, Harry Hunter, Nelson Walters and Harry Fletcher, pending on habeas corpus proceedings, instituted by each, separately, asking to be released on the ground that they were illegally deprived of their liberty.

These four applicants were found guilty of illegal possession of intoxicating liquor by Mayor Fitzpatrick under the state law, known as the Crabbe act, and each was fined and in default was committed to the county jail until the fine and costs were paid.

Judge Adkins in deciding said proceedings followed the case of Ed. Tunney against the State, which was recently decided by Chief Justice William H. Taft of the supreme court of the United States, in which the court held that that part of the Crabbe act which confers jurisdiction on mayors and justices of the peace to try and sentence offenders of said prohibition law, was contrary to the Fifth and Fourteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States for the reason that it was restraining the liberties of the accused without "due process of law."

The court found that the guaranty of "due process of law" as provided in the constitution was violated by reason of mayors and justices of the peace receiving their costs in the cases on conviction of the accused. The same decision was also reached by Judge Houck of the appellate court of the Fifth Judicial district sitting in Perry county.

There seems to be no other alternative but to release persons who have been imprisoned for violations of the Crabbe act when their cases have been heard by mayors and justices of the peace since the highest court in the land has decided such courts are without jurisdiction in such cases as being in violation of the constitution of the United States.

The prisoners were represented by Tom A. Renick and George G. Adkins and the State by E. A. Brown, prosecuting attorney and the mayor was represented by C. A. Weldon, city solicitor.

New Idea in Polygamy

One generally associates polygamy with a plurality of wives, but Lieut. Col. A. H. W. Haywood, in his book, "Sport and Service in Africa," gives us something new in this line.

"I must not omit to mention an interesting, and in many ways, remarkable, country through a portion of which I passed after crossing the Tanezrouft. This is the Hoggar: It is a mountainous land situated almost in the middle of the central Sahara. It is the true home of the Tuareg, a race supposed to be descended from the Numidians. . . . The country covers a vast area and is traversed by a mountain range, attaining a height of 11,000 feet. The Tuaregs wear veils, that is, the men do. The women are unveiled. The women govern the land and inherit the rights which in Europe are inherited by the other sex. Moreover, the women may have as many as six husbands, whereas the men are only allowed one wife."

Hoaxed French Scientists

A French adventurer, Jean Baptiste Douville, received the gold medal of the Paris Geographical society for the most important discovery in 1830. The award was based on his book on the Congo—a fabrication.

BIT OF WIRE DISCOURAGES CORN BORERS

Simple Device Helps Greatly in Plowing Trash Under Ohio Farmers Find.

A quarter's worth of wire attached to a sulky plow will do wonders in discouraging the European corn borer, farmers in borer-infested counties of Ohio are now discovering. And for plowing under trash in general, where the desire is for a clean job of plowing, whether or not the corn borer is aimed at, wires attached to the plow will do the job efficiently, according to agricultural engineers plowing demonstrations in the corn borer area under the guidance of the agricultural college extension service of the Ohio State university.

For a wheeled plow the engineers suggest, in heavy trash three wires may be used to each bottom. Select No. 9, soft wire and cut it into 10 or 12-foot lengths.

Attach one wire to the shank or stem of the rolling coulter at a point as low as possible. Another may be placed on the plow ahead of the first wire, and slightly higher. A third wire can go back of the first wire that on the shank of the coulter, and as low as possible. All of these wires, should drag under the furrow slice.

Should the stalks be heavy and hard to pull down on the top of the furrow slice increase the length of wire for this will put more tension in the wire. Increasing the length is better than attaching a weight to the end of the wire.

Wide-bottom plows do best in covering trash, the engineers have found, because they turn the furrow slice over more completely. Coulters and jointers help materially. A sharp share is another essential.

Chinese Chef Master of Art, Says Writer

On the whole, well-cooked Chinese food is unsurpassable, writes Genevieve Wimsatt in "A Griffin in China," and the occidental gourmand who overcomes his prejudices and eats the food of China for even a short period of time, finds that ever afterward all other cooking seems flat, tame and savorless to him. In Paris or Vienna or New Orleans, wherever he may dine, as long as he lives he will hunger for the oil-roasted duck of Peking, of which only the crisp, amber-brown skin is served, cut into bits, spread on paper-thin pancakes, rolled into a cylinder along with a bit of green vegetable and a thick brown sauce, and eaten from the hand like a sandwich; and whenever he sits down to fish he will compare it, unfavorably, with the fish of China, boiled in wine, blanketed with gravy sauce, salt and tart and sweet, and flavored with fresh ginger.

How to aid others to bear pain: Well, sympathy helps a little.

The average man meets temptation about three-fourths of the way.

STYLES IN CROOKS' WEAPONS CHANGE

Carefully Selected Pistol Is Now Favorite.

New York.—The weapon would have appealed to anyone with a liking for firearms; its long blue barrel looked grim and forbidding, and though its curved butt was inlaid with ivory there was nothing suggestive of a toy about it. On the contrary, this pistol, well oiled and polished, gave the impression that it was ready at all times for action.

A stroke of good fortune had landed both weapon and owner in the hands of the police. A detective carefully extracted the bullets from the chamber, counted them and placed them in an envelope for future reference. He remarked that from his observations the pistol is today the favorite weapon of the crook.

The criminal selects his weapon with great care and does not hesitate to pay a good price for it. Indeed, he seldom buys a cheap weapon; most of the firearms which the police have seized and confiscated are in first-class working condition. The crook usually carries a .32 or a .38, though occasionally he totes a .45. However, as a rule he finds this caliber of pistol too large and unwieldy for his purpose. He prefers a smaller weapon since it is easier to conceal.

"Crooks," said a detective, "use a great variety of weapons. Just as a shoemaker is known by his last a thief is known by the instruments he carries. You can usually tell by a crook's weapon what particular line of criminality he follows. A decade ago crooks used a great many more kinds of weapons than they do now. The average criminal is content with a single weapon.

Pistol the Favorite.
"A large percentage of criminals have discarded other weapons solely for the pistol.

"When hold-ups were quite common detectives intercepted three robbers as they ran from a store. One of them had a formidable magazine gun. He had cut off the rounded points of the bullets and had flattened them out, obviously with the intention of plowing a big hole in the anatomy of a victim he might feel inclined to shoot. The incident suffices to show the callousness and cruelty of the average criminal and how little he cares for human life.

"There are plenty of men in the department today who can recall the time when gun-toting criminals were much more the exception than the rule. Indeed, there were any number of professional crooks who never used firearms in their business. They used other weapons which answered their purpose better, and some of their favorite weapons are seldom seen or heard of now.

"The club was a primitive weapon and was superseded by the sandbag, which worked effectively and left few marks. A short piece of rubber hose was used for the same purpose. The sandbag is out of date, but occasionally crops up.

"The sandbag was discarded for the blackjack. A blow from a loaded blackjack will put anyone quickly to sleep. Akin to the blackjack are brass knuckles, and frequently a victim is unable to say whether he has been hit by one or the other. Both of them are occasionally used today by thugs. They are regarded as deadly weapons and it is as serious an offense to have them in one's possession as a pistol.

"A few years ago a long, sharp-bladed knife or a dagger vied with the pistol in popularity. Indeed, there were far more stabbing affrays than shootings that came under the notice of the police. The wielder of dagger or knife often used these instruments with deadly effect, and occasionally some one would be stabbed to death. In recent years there has been a big falling off in such crimes and instead of being stabbed people are now shot.

Gunman a Weakling.
"The gun-toting criminal is a recent product. He attained his full prominence a few years ago when crime was rampant. He is a different product from the old-type criminal who was strong and robust and did not need a gun. The present-day gunmen are invariably puny, undersized men, and are weak mentally as well as physically. You see innumerable examples of them as they dribble into station houses; and they are all alike—sallow, frail, and the sickest-looking lot of criminals the world ever saw.

"They are only daring when they are under the spell of narcotics. A large number of criminals are confirmed drug addicts, and in order to keep themselves supplied with drugs they will often take a desperate chance. Some of these criminal addicts spend $5 to $25 a day on drugs. A good many crooks who hold up drug stores do so to get narcotics. It is common for one of them to demand narcotics of a druggist. If they are unable to get their favorite drug they will hold up a store to get money with which to purchase drugs.

"It is seldom criminals get drunk when they have serious work to do. They realize that a drunken hold-up man would not get very far. He would be slow in action and liable to queer the whole works. This happened when a drunken Indian attempted to hold up a Chicago hotel."

Divorces Increase
London.—Divorces are increasing because newspapers are now forbidden to print the details.

AMUSEMENTS

If ever a picture deserved the adjective, studendous—Frank Lloyd's "The Eagle of the Sea" which opened at the Met theater last night, is it! After sitting thru eight reels of romance, thrills, smiles and tears, this writer is convinced that the film is worth every cent of the great fortune Paramount must have poured into its making.

Altho of a spectacular nature, "The Eagle of the Sea" cannot be classified as such. Romantic, it is more than a romance. Altho historical, thrilling and adventurous, it cannot be tabulated as any of these. It is all of the above woven together with a deftness of which only Frank Lloyd is capable.

The story, that of the most adventurous body of men ever gathered—weather-beaten buccannars of the Spanish Main—is pictured so accurately that as one views it he wonders whether the spirits of those old sea-dogs didn't come to life while the picture was being made.

The plot's action hinges on Jean Lafitte, terror of the Mexican Gulf, who because he aided General Jackson in the battle of New Orleans, was pardoned for his depredations as a pirate. Learning of a scheme to involve England and the United States in war, he resumes his searoving to capture the plotters. A terrific battle takes place in which Jean violates his parole and defeats his enemies.

Florence Vidor and Ricardo Cortez, the two featured players, deserve particular praise. As the toast of New Orleans, Miss Vidor has the best role of her career. Cortez, the dash ing devil-may-care pirate, sweeps you off your feet by his audacity.

One of the best films in many months, "The Eagle of the Sea" is one picture you should not miss.

Biblical Character

The queen of Sheba was the sovereign whose visit to King Solomon is recorded in I Kings, Chapter X. The Sabaeans, over whom this queen reigned, were the inhabitants of southwestern Arabia, a country now called Yemen. It borders on the Red sea, and is noted for the superior quality of the coffee grown there.

How Do You Choose Shoes?

Do you select shoes which will be smart and becoming and entirely suited to your needs?—or simply because they happen to be the newest fad?

In a season when so many styles are brought forth, it is very wise to choose your shoes for definite purposes, or to wear with certain costumes. For, after all, being "well dressed" depends upon your own attractiveness. And clothes, or shoes chosen in that way, will always give greater pleasure.

Ohio Boys Find Mummy of an Indian Princess

Lancaster, Ohio.—A mummy believed to be that of an Indian princess, found in a forgotten cave, 100 feet above a creek bed, in a wild stretch of country near here by John and Robert Goslin, boy scouts, has been unearthed for the Ohio State archeological museum.

The discovery was classed as one of great importance by C. H. Shetrone, curator of the museum, who declared pottery and other relics found with the mummy indicated that the person was of high rank. The body was encased in a shroud of woven reeds, a part of the burial ceremony reserved only for leaders among the tribe.

Mr. Shetrone said the body probably was that of a daughter of Parhe of the Crane, chief of the Indian village which once stood on the site of Lancaster.

Our oldest and best friends we prize for their faults.

JOHN HICKMAN APPEALS TO KING OF BELGIUM

Condemned Slayer Seeks Aid of Monarch For Whom He Acted As Body Guard.

Chillicothe, April 16.—Because John Hickman, of Columbus, convicted of slaying Dan Garrett, a policeman, served during the World war in the body guard to King Albert of Belgium, his attorneys today appealed to the Belgian consul at Cincinnati to enlist the Belgium ruler in the condemned man's behalf.

Hickman, who was found guilty of first degree murder by a jury here, was sentenced to be electrocuted April 9, but action was stayed by the Supreme court to permit a hearing on a motion for a new trial.

Petitions asking Governor Vic Donahey to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment today were circulated in Chillicothe, Spargursville, Bournville, Bainbridge and Floodwood.

PREDICTS BETTER BRAND OF BASE-BALL THIS YEAR

The brand of base ball played by the major leagues this coming season will show considerable improvement over that of the past few seasons, asserts Hugh Fullerton, well known sports writer. Writing in this week's Liberty, Fullerton says:

"There is one chance that base ball in the majors may improve this season. For two years prosperity and Florida land have seemed more important to some athletes than the game, and have distracted their attention. McGraw's unfortunate real estate development hit the Giants a jolt. Bill Doak quit to amass millions; Dazzy Vance had an attack of real estate on the arm; Miller Huggins saw visions of millions and the possibility of having so much money he could tell Ruth where to get off. The real estate boom was more talked of among the athletes than base ball was. In the midst of a game some of them were figuring the turnover. Later they began worrying about whether they would get out alive.

"This year," Fullerton explains, "the old pay check is restored to its normal status and in some cases is above par. This year the boys may work for real money instead of dreaming of fortunes."

WAITERS' LINE AN ODD SIGHT

Jobless Men Stand on Nassau Street, New York, Every Morning.

New York.—One of the oldest and oddest "sights" of New York is the "waiters' line" in Nassau street, between Ann and Fulton. The line forms every morning about 10:30.

The men who assemble in Nassau street are those who are looking for work as waiters, dishwashers, etc., in the cheaper downtown lunchrooms. Naturally, they are neither prosperous looking nor well dressed, but they are only unemployed, not "unemployables."

The block on Nassau street is their well-known and recognized rendezvous, and has been for many years. The proprietors of the eating houses which need help look for them there. It is a free, outdoor employment bureau. Sometimes there are a dozen seekers for work there, sometimes more; it depends on the state of the labor market.

Men Assemble Singly.

First one man makes his appearance and stands waiting at this curb, but it is not long before he is joined by another. They seldom come in pairs. Sometimes they talk, or read newspapers, but generally they just stand and wait. They hold their places on both sides of the street, most often in a single line, but when there are many seekers for employment the line doubles. The prospective employer appears and walks up and down the row to scrutinize the men. He selects one or more as most likely to meet his wants. The rest look hard at employer and employed, but say nothing. Probably they think, "Well, another guy's got a job for a day."

The men who land the work walk off with their new bosses. The others hang around until about twelve o'clock, in the hope of a belated job turning up, and then the line melts away, not to be formed again until the following morning. Generally the men depart one by one. There is not much comradeship among these "out of works."

Never Bothered by Police.

The police do not enforce against them the municipal ordinance on loitering on the street.

"They're looking for work and doing no harm, so why should we interfere with them?" said a policeman.

He was asked, "How long has the waiters' line been in existence?" and replied: "Search me! They were here long before my time. I've heard some of these old-timers around here say it's an old New York custom for men and the bosses to meet here in Nassau street and get together."

Boy Scouts Save Train With Bandannas

Dover, Ohio.—Stationing themselves in front of a 25-ton boulder which had dropped from an overhanging cliff to the tracks of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh railroad, a mile north of here, Donald Mason and his troop of ten boy scouts flagged a speeding C. & P. passenger train by waving 11 flaming-red bandannas just in time to prevent it from crashing into the huge rock.

War and Peace

Peace is the happy, natural state of man; war his corruption, his disgrace. —Thomson.

WAS THE WATCH YOU CARRY NEW...WHEN HANSOMS RULED THE STREETS?

A watch may never lose a second yet be many years slow

The owner of such a watch may never miss a train or an appointment but it is the one false note in his modern makeup, probably the only thing he has that stamps him as a bit old-fashioned, a trifle behind the times. And yet a new and modish Elgin can be had at a moderate sum. Slipped into your pocket, or strapped on your wrist, it will win and hold your affection as no other watch possibly can. For Elgin is conceded to be the world's standard for watch integrity.

FARM FIRES

Farm fire loss in the United States has reached the alarming annual sum of $150,000,000. The difficulty of protecting farms with city apparatus, and the general apathy of farmers toward helping prevent fires is largely responsible for this terrible loss. A few fire prevention practices on the farm would make farming more profitable.

"Farmers should supply themselves with chemical extinguishers, water buckets, ladders, and other equipment to protect themselves from the ravages of fire," says the Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, "Jefferson County Union."

Workers and Machinery

"The remarkable efficiency of the American industrial worker is due largely to the heavy investment in labor-saving machinery that has been made to aid him," C. D. Morris of the Western Railways' Committee on Public Relations told members of the Winnetka (Ill.) Rotary club. "Behind every industrial worker in the United States there is an average investment of $4,000, and behind every rail worker in the country there is a $12,000 average investment."

No man is a failure if he is able to learn from his misfortunes.

The Lunch Room Girl

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

MRS. DAVENPORT DAWKINS, as president of the City Improvement society of the flourishing town
of Benton, felt it incumbent upon her
to right every civic wrong that was brought to her attention. And sometimes she sought out wrongs that
were not brought to her attention.
She had watched the workmen going
past her house to the Granger factory
and had noticed with increasing concern the fact that they all carried
lunch boxes. The thought of all these poor men eating cold lunches troubled
her. She did not reflect that most of
of the boxes were supplied with
vacuum bottles containing hot tea
or coffee. As she thought the matter
over it became to her a burning
shame that Mr. Granger with all his millions should force his men to eat
cold lunches.

"I don't see how he forces them,"
said the vice president of the C. I. S.
when Mrs. Dawkins drew her attention to the "burning shame."

"He ought to have a lunch room in the plant," said Mrs. Dawkins.

"Well, I'll bet you a new hat you can't get Mr. Granger to do anything of the sort," said the vice president.
"None of the Grangers have been any
too philanthropic and from all I can hear young Tarry Granger, who manages the place since his father's death,
is a chip off the old block."

"I'll bet I can—one way or another,"
said the indomitable Mrs. Dawkins.

So Mrs. Dawkins wrote to a niece
of hers who had taken a course in
lunch room management as part of
her college course in domestic economy. Then she met her niece in the big city fifty miles away and talked
the matter over with her.

So Polly Proctor, who was becoming a little weary of the life of idleness
she had lived during the two years
since her graduation, donned an
inexpensive little blue serge frock
and went to call on Mr. Granger. She told him that she had heard that he
had a large corps of workmen who
had to eat cold lunches and that she would be very glad to advise him
concerning the installing of an up-to-date lunch room in his factory. She would
furthermore like the job of directing
the lunch room after it started.

Mrs. Dawkins heard with deep gratitude that Mr. Granger had seen
his civic duty and had given orders
for the installation of an up-to-date
lunch room in his plant. Not wanting to let Mr. Granger know that Mrs.
Dawkins had been promoter of the scheme, Polly did not go to live with
her aunt, but took a room in a boarding house and ate three meals a day
in her own lunch room.

Mrs. Dawkins did not know that
Mr. Granger often found it convenient
to wait until he came to the factory
to have his breakfast and that then
he sat with Polly in the lunch room
kitchen leisurely drinking coffee and
eating muffins or griddle cakes which Polly had made. Sometimes, too, he dropped in at half past five to join Polly in the light supper that she ate
there before leaving the factory for
the night.

Then one day Mrs. Granger was surprised to see an expensive car
draw up before her house and to see her niece Polly and a tall young
man jump out and come hurrying up
to the door. A few minutes later she met her niece and the young man in
her drawing room, and she knew that it was Harry Granger. "I had to tell
Harry that you were my aunt," said
Polly. "We came to tell you the news.
We're engaged—Isn't it wonderful?"

It was indeed unquestionably wonderful to Mrs. Dawkins for the Granger millions were said to be numerous. Mrs. Dawkins instantly took
upon herself the credit of the match.
At least if it hadn't been for her Polly
never would have met Mr. Granger.

"Now I suppose you'll have to get
another girl to run the lunch room,
that is, if you are going to be married
soon," she said.

Harry Granger laughed and so did
Polly.

"I don't believe that we'll bother
with the lunch room any longer," said Harry Granger. "You see only two
or three of the men ever eat there.
Outsiders are allowed in and it's been
crowded for the most part with office
workers in the neighborhood who take advantage of the low prices and the good cooking. The factory men don't like it—they even resent it a little.
They'd rather drink their rank coffee
out of a vacuum bottle and munch
a hunky meat sandwich out of a box
sitting on a plank out in the factory
yard than eat what we call whole-
some food at a civilized table in an
up-to-date lunch room. It wasn't Polly's fault though—I knew from the
start that as far as the factory men
went the lunch room idea was no
good."

"Then why in the world did you spend all the money to have one installed? asked the dumbfounded Mrs.
Dawkins.

"Well," said Harry deliberately, "I figured right from the start that Polly
was the girl I wanted to marry. And I thought that if I said 'Yes' to her
then she would say 'Yes' to me later
on. But that lunch room was worth while. We've had some cozy little suppers together in the kitchen there,
haven't we?"

And as Polly and Harry exchanged
a look of perfect understanding, Mrs.
Dawkins dropped back in her chair
and murmured "I'm blessed."

WOOL GROWERS COOPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Handled Over Four Million
Pounds Last Year—First
of New Clip Coming in.

Wool growers of Ohio, interested
in cooperative merchandizing of their product, are bending their efforts to secure an additional million pounds
of wool for sale thru the pool this
year, according to word just received
by the County Farm bureau from
headquarters of the Wool Growers
Cooperative association. Last year
the total handled by the cooperative
amounted to more than 4,000,000
pounds. Of this amount 19,303
pounds were sent by 68 consigners
from this county. J. A. Dinsmore has been named wool leader of the movement to increase the amount going to
the pool from this county.

The Ohio pool, started in 1918,
now has the largest membership of
any wool cooperative in the country
and stands second to only one western association in the number of pounds consigned to it. About 10,- 000 growers, the great majority of
them, on farms, were served thru
the organization last year. Indiana
and Michigan wools were also handled by the Ohio cooperative in considerable quantities.

First wools of the 1927 clip are already being received at the Columbus warehouse, according to R. A.
Hammond, warehouse manager and treasurer of the association. Approximately 3,000,000 pounds of
wool are already under contract to
the association, and campaigns for
new members now going forward are expected to add to this amount.

FLOOD SWEEPS THE ARKANSAS VALLEY

TOWNS OF ENGLAND AND ALTHEIMER IN RIVER'S PATH

The Flood Area Extends Over Arkansas, Missouri and Mississippi With Lesser Areas Inundated In Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Louisiana—Widespread Distress and Ruin Mark the Fair Valley Which Drains Nearly One-Third of This Country.

The old Mississippi river dyke on which 300 men have been laboring for two days in an effort to stave off the attacks of the Arkansas river, went out Monday afternoon. The towns of England and Altheimer are in the path of the river and the water if expected to spread for 60 miles south of Keat.

The breaking of the Plum Bayou levee, which sent its waters surging into the old river dyke which gave way Monday night will probably flood 400,000 acres of rich farming land. Already 115 families have been driven from their homes in this immediate section.

Only a temporary levee protects England now and that is expected to go with a predicted rise Tuesday.

Heavy with the flood waters of two-fifths of the total area of continental United States, the Mississippi river and its tributaries hammered incessantly at the levees man has built to reclaim hundreds of square miles of fertile soil.

Thruout their length, man and machine continued to pile sand bags and construct emergency revetments on the dykes to protect the flood plains extending at an average width of 50 miles from the river ridge built by deposits thru the centuries.

Widespread distress and extensive ruin mark the places where the river has overcome its artificial bounds and laid claim to uncouthed thousands of acres of land.

Spreading widely over Missouri, Arkansas and Mississippi, with lesser areas inundated in Illinois, Kentucky Tennessee and Louisiana, the flood has driven an estimated 25,000 persons from their homes and wrought material ruin, expected to mount into the millions of dollars.

Upward of a dozen lives have been lost. Most disheartening to the refugees atop levees or in camps that dot the valley, are the upward revisions of flood stages issued by the weather bureau.

At Fort Smith, Arkansas, where the Arkansas enters the state of her name, new rises were registered and official predictions said new floods probably would break all records with a stage of 37 to 38 feet.

The city faces a shortage of drinking water. Elsewhere in the state, where the worst conditions prevail, the Arkansas, White and St. Francis rivers have broken thru in a dozen places.

"The levees are holding." This word, coming from tired engineers along the main artery, has been insufficient assurance to the residents behind the levees and while the women and children move to higher ground, the men, their farms now lakes, concentrate upon strengthening the earthen embankments against a flood, said by the weather bureau to be the greatest in history.

The most serious situation on the Mississippi river north of Vicksburg Monday night appeared to be at Knowlton, Arkansas, just above Laconia landing. Residents sent out a cry of distress Monday and a government boat was sent to pick them up before the impending breach there should occur.

river in the delta or stood guard against possible attempts to ease the pressure on one side by dynamiting the other. Along a front from the more northern points in Mississippi and Louisiana to below New Orleans the work went on while the river cut shallow gashes in new levees, brought a sand boil to the back of a levee, or sent seepage bubbling thru sudden lowlands.

One man was reported shot near Poydras, below New Orleans, Monday night by levee guards. A break occurred at Poydras during the 1922 high water and armed guards are patrolling the levees. Four men approached the levee in a skiff, the report said, and when they failed to respond to the guard's challenge they were fired upon. There was a scream and the boat moved away. Residents had been warned not to approach the levees after dark.

He had paid but one premium of $20.16. The policy was written when he was at work at Hilliards a few months ago. His mother was named as the beneficiary. N. G. Spangler of this city is a director in this company.

STATE AWARD PAID FAMILIES POISON DEATHS

Damage awards totaling $19,000 growing out of the death of two Ohio State university students and permanent injury of two others in the strychnine poisoning at the university two years ago were recommended by the state sundry claims boards Monday.

Awards of $7500 each were voted to the families of Charles H. Huls, Logan and Louis Puskin, Canton, the two students who died as a result of taking poison dispensed as medicine from the university dispensary. The board allowed $2500 to Delbert Thompson, Canton and $1500 to Timothy McCarthy, Fremont, who were made seriously ill by the poison, and whose health was permanently impaired as a result.

Before the claims are paid, the recommendations of the board must be ratified by action of the general assembly and signed by the governor. Finance Director Wilbur B. Baker, Governor Donahey's representative on the board, held out for an award of $6,500 each in the two deaths, the maximum amount allowed by the industrial commission in cases of accidental death.

The board added $1000 to this amount in each case to help pay the cost of the students' education.

GOVERNOR VETOES THREE SIGNS ELEVEN

Bills, Weak School Districts Can Borrow Money in Anticipation of State Aid.

Three bills were vetoed, 11 were signed and one will be permitted to become a law without signature, it was announced Monday by Governor Donahey.

Bills vetoed included the Roberts bill to increase salaries of county commissioners and bar them from fees or per diem now collected, the Marshall bill proposing to increase salary of the chaplain from $1500 to $2500 per year and the Abele bill to authorize theft insurance for funds of securities in custody of the county treasurer.

Jones bill authorizing weak school districts to borrow money in anticipation of state aid which has been appropriated by the general assembly will be permitted to become a law without his signature, the governor said, his objection being that the measure was passed as an emergency.

The governor still has 10 bills passed by the legislature on his desk awaiting action, while 29 bills passed by both houses have not come to him for action yet.

Three of the bills signed bore names of legislators elected from Columbus. Two grade crossings in Columbus will be eliminated as a result of the enactment of the Ward bill granting to the Pennsylvania railroad company a strip of land alongside the state fair grounds for a new overhead right-of-way in place of the present grade-level tracks. It was introduced by Representative Grant P. Ward, Republican, Columbus.

Under terms of the Herbert bill, introduced by Senator Paul M. Herbert, Republican, Columbus, transfer of property of one religious or charitable organization to another will be possible by vote of two-thirds of the members of the organization.

McKinley bill, introduced by Representative Jerry S. McKinley, Republican, Columbus, provides that in case of retrenchments in public service, the youngest in point of service shall be retired first, while in case of enlargement of service, those thus laid off shall be reappointed first, in order of service, the oldest first.

Among other bills signed were the Morgan bill repealing (10-2) obsolete and unconstitutional sections of the general code and the Norton-Rohr bill appropriating $150,000 for construction in France and Belgium of memorials to the Thirty-seventh Division in the word war.

Others signed included: The Walther bill to require motor vehicles containing explosives to come to full stop at railroad grade crossings.

The Stevens bill authorizing the sale to Dayton of Mad river feeder canals in Dayton to aid in that city's grade crossing program.

The Shafer-Burnet bill to provide additional relief to needy blind persons.

The Meyers bill to permit the Northwestern Ohio Natural Gas Co., to construct a pipe line across a section of state property in Lucas county.

The Johnson bill to permit county commissioners to give surety company bonds instead of bonds signed by two property owners.

The Norton-Bender bill to authorize boards of education to contract with private organizations for special instruction in school work.

HOW FAKE AUCTIONS GET YOUR MONEY

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

(This is one of a series of articles exposing the wiles of sharpers who "get after your money.")

NEARLY everyone is ready "to take a fling" at getting something for nothing or at least for less than it is worth. Because of this many are duped into paying more than regular market prices for things they buy. This class of people is especially susceptible to the appeal of anything resembling an auction. Fake auctions with the cards stacked against the buyer are very common. They rank high among the fraudulent schemes of the country.

The "here today and gone tomorrow" auction faker rents a fine looking house in some high-class section of the city in which he plans to operate. He furnishes this house with the cheapest imitations of high-class furnishings, with here and there a fine piece which is to serve for bait. Certain pieces are alleged antiques with a thread of glorious history behind them. Of others it is claimed that they have been handed down for generations, originating with some person noted in history or with some famous Southern family. Of other pieces it is maintained that they are made of rare and precious woods imported from far across the sea. The overstuffed furniture, it is claimed, is all high grade of standard manufacture.

Regardless of its superiority and antiquity, the furniture must be sold at once, for the owner is compelled to take an extended trip, the family physician having ordered travel and a change of climate as a means of saving his life. Nothing is to be spared and the deep slashings of the auctioneer's axe must go on with no price too low. Individual pre-auction sales, of course, will be arranged for persons who are unable to attend the auction. The day of the sale is here. Purchasers are arriving. They are met at the door by the woman member of the outfit—a dramatic person who knows when to shed tears at the thought of having her happy home broken up and her valuable furnishings

ings torn from her. She tells her sad story—how she must leave her home and go to distant lands with her husband whose health is broken and life in danger. But she is resigned to her "awful calamity" and will sell all her lovely furniture even at a great sacrifice.

As she directs attention to certain pieces of furniture her voice quavers. She almost sobs aloud as she names the price she is forced to accept. "Less than half the original cost, but price is no object. We must take the train tomorrow," and she wipes a tear from her eye. Fully convinced the sale is genuine, and sympathizing with the unfortunate woman, buyers clamor for the furniture.

But no sooner are the articles transferred from their setting in the slightly darkened rooms of their original owner and displayed in the sunlight of the purchaser's home, than the truth about the sale begins to dawn in the mind of each new owner. Close examination reveals that evidently this wonderful collection of furniture was but odds and ends and unsalable pieces picked up from second-hand stores by these fly-by-night fakers. Some proves to be the rankest of imitations of the cheapest grade, and the overstuffed is so poorly constructed that it squeaks and weaves under the lightest weight.

The Birds Have Flown

When those who have been cheated rush back to the house the next day, intent on making it "hot for the faker,"

(A future article will present means to foil crooked promoters' wiles and tell how to separate good from bad investments.)

Messrs. Catch 'em and Skin 'em. An investigation of the store made six months later disclosed that its stock was then larger than the day it announced the auction. Its sales in the interim had exceeded $600,000. The facts are that two trucks had backed up to the rear of the store nightly and unloaded new merchandise, principally odd lines and job lots picked up here and there at a bargain. Under the guise of a legitimate auction, or private sale at auction prices, fourteen times as much furniture was sold in the six months as the store contained at the time of the failure. Comparison of sale prices disclosed that victims were persuaded to buy liberally on the assurance they were getting sacrifice prices, when as a matter of fact they were actually paying from five to 25 per cent more than reliable stores were charging for better goods.

Fake auctions and private sales are used not only for furniture but also in the sale of jewelry and other merchandise. The lesson which this story teaches is that there is nothing to be gained by patronizing such sales. On the other hand, there is a better than 50-50 chance of sustaining a loss.

Not all auctions are fraudulent, for some are conducted fairly and honestly, but before you draw your savings from the bank and spend them for auction goods it will pay you to get the facts. For your own protection make it an unbreakable rule to confine your expenditures and investments to reliable firms and individuals. In dealing with them you are assured a square deal.

The outstanding trust institutions of the United States are those that were pioneers in using advertising as a means of selling their services, a speaker told a conference of trust companies held in New York recently. He presented the results of a questionnaire sent out by the Trust Company Division, American Bankers Association, making an inquiry into the advertising practices of institutions doing a trust business. Three out of every four trust companies and banks engaged in extending trust services were found to be advertising. The opinion was expressed by the speaker

that their growth would closely follow the amounts spent each year for advertising.

The local newspaper is the most highly regarded advertising medium, it was disclosed. In all, 929 companies answering the questionnaire used the local papers and 333 did not. The institutions buying space in local papers are evenly divided among all sections of the country. Comparing six media for selling personal trust services and considering their effectiveness from the standpoint of producing results, the speaker declared that the local newspapers should head the list. Folders and booklets can reach a limited audience, he observed, but the newspaper is the best medium for acquiring prestige and mass circulation. It should never be omitted, he urged.

Body of Mingo Man Found By Coroner on Highway Following Mysterious Call.

Urbana, April 16.—A mysterious Easter eve tragedy occurred near here tonight when Coroner I. W. Armprister received an unidentified telephone call telling him he would find a dead man on a highway near here.

Hurriedly driven to the named location, seven miles north of Urbana, the coroner found the body of Frederick P. Stevenson, aged 23, of Mingo, near the edge of the highway and an overturned automobile in the center of the road.

Coroner Armprister said he believed it was a case of a "hit and run" accident—the guilty party evidently afraid to face justice after the fatal accident—but his conscience so preyed on him that he telephoned authorities nevertheless.

Stevenson's wife is in Lima. He recently returned here from Arizona, where he had gone for his health.

Coroner Armprister said his telephone communicant immediately left the wire after telling him he would find the body and he did not learn his name.

The young man was a grand-nephew of the late Job E. Stevenson.

BODY OF CHINESE

Who Died In War Camp To Be Returned To China.

Cincinnati, April 17.—After resting for nine years in American soil while his relatives in China stinted and saved, the flag-draped body of Private Sam Pong will be one of 200 dead Chinese to be returned to their mother country.

In accordance with ancient Chinese customs the dead of China are always returned to native soil, but in that land of small wages it often requires years of saving before enough money is accumulated to pay the transportation cost. This shipment of bodies will be assembled in New York.

Sam Pong was 27 when he answered America's call during the World War, but influenza cheated him at Camp Sherman in 1918. His body goes to a village near Canton where his relatives live.

Sam Pong was a former laundryman of this city, being located in the old Melvin block now the Crist block, occupied by Clark's 5 & 10 c Store.

AMERICAN

Forest Week Arbor Day Literature May Be Secured From State Forester.

The President of the United States has designated April 24 to 30 as American Forest Week, and urges that during this week the American people give serious thought to the enormous losses of timber by fires, and the necessity of the wise and economical use of our forest resources.

The Governor of Ohio has also asked for special observance of this week, and has set aside Friday, April 29 as Arbor Day for Ohio.

It is urged that special exercises be held in the schools and among various civic organizations, and that the general public give consideration to the forest needs of their respective communities.

The President urges the reforestation of idle lands, and states that one-fourth of our soil is better suited for timber growing than any other purpose, and expresses the view that our industrial and agricultural stability will be strengthened by bringing into full productive use the lands that are now lying waste.

There are at least a million acres of idle and low grade agricultural lands in Ohio that should be returned to the forest. Most of this land is contained in the farms of the State. Owners may now obtain trees for restocking idle areas from the State nurseries. It is obviously more profitable to have idle land in growing forests than to permit it to remain unproductive.

Literature suitable for American Forest Week may be obtained from the State Forester, at Wooster, Ohio.

HIGHWAY LIGHTS

Perhaps the most pregnant scheme for increasing the cost of government which has been fostered in recent years is the proposal for lighting highways in the country at night, as suggested in bills introduced in the General Assembly and now pending.

The possibilities of the proposition are set forth in one section of the bill by Senator Frank C. Wise, Stark County, which asserts that there shall not be more than 100 lights for each 200,000 of population in the state. Now, let's see. There are 6,000,000 people in Ohio, so that under the ration proposed, 30 times 100 lights are proposed, making 3,000 lights on the state system of 11,000 miles. As many miles are in cities and municipalities already lighted one may count off 1,000 miles and reduce the ratio to 3,000 lights for 10,000 miles, or three to a mile. These are to be placed at dangerous crossings, curves and railway tracks. That's something for the light salesmen, who have sold virtually all of the traffic lights that the small cities and villages can stand. One may guess they are hungry for more business. But the good things in the Wise bill do not stop here. There are the county roads, too, and here 100 lights would be given to each 100,000 of population. Granted that the County Commissioners can be persuaded, there is a possible sale here for 6,000 lights, so that the farther one goes in the bill the better it gets, like the packs of the old-fashioned peddlers. Now, as a matter of fact, these lights in general are little more than a nuisance, as every night driver knows. The modern car makes its own light and the dangerous places on Ohio roads are marked by a good system of signs. Accidents, save for defective mechanism and recklessness, need not occur. Nor does any one see a substantial need for subsidizing the electric light companies. They seem to be struggling along without outside help.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Fable

Peter Rabbit had slept a long time. Now his hair had grown so long that nobody knew him. He saw passing by an old, old man, weak and tottery, a younger-looking one with rheumy eyes and shaking legs, and another who looked a trifle less ancient.

"I am—eh-heh-heh!—Farmer Brown," said the first old man. "This is my son, Farmer Brown's boy, John, whom you may have seen, and here is his son, Farmer Brown's grandson, Demi-John, of whom you have never heard before."

And they went tottering down the hill, leaving Peter Rabbit considerably interested.—Kansas City Star.

TROD BY ALEXANDER*Seeks to Trace Route of Great Conqueror.In an endeavor to trace the route followed by Alexander the Great when he invaded India, the English explorer, Sir Aurel Stein, has succeeded in penetrating a region untrod by Europeans since Alexander's army swept into it more than 2,200 years ago.Sir Aurel Stein's achievement, which was beset with perils, crowned efforts extending over more than 20 years. He has just divulged the first part of the record of his hazardous trip, which was undertaken on behalf of the Indian archeological survey
and with the sanction of the government of India, says the New York Times.It took him to a hitherto unvisited tract of territory beyond the present
northwestern frontier of India through which, according to him, Alexander must have marched in 327 and 326 B.
C. when on his way from Kabul river to invade the Punjab.The first part of Sir Aurel's description is taken up largely with his earlier efforts to penetrate this for-bidden land. Though he had tried for a long time previously it was not until 1904 that he succeeded in penetrating part of it and in being the first European to ascend Mount Ma-haban Peak, which he hoped—in vain
—to identify with a mountain mentioned in the ancient chronicle of Alexander's Indian campaign.He continued his investigations in 1906, visiting territory which he felt assured was traversed by the Macedonian army. Further research, however, was prevented at that time by the fact that the bulk of the region
was still inaccessible to Europeans.
Sir Aurel kept up his efforts, nevertheless, until in 1921 he again visited the dangerous unknown frontier territories, but he failed to reach the area,
along the Indus which he believed Alexander had traversed, because the Pathan tribes there were engaged in deadly feuds, making the journey altogether too perilous for a European.
Finally the frontier region which he wished to visit came under the sway of a strong ruler, a grandson,
by the way, of that Akhond of Swat made famous years ago in a poem by the American poet Lanigan. Aided by this potentate and the British Indian authorities, Sir Aurel Stein was enabled to explore what he terms the "fascinating region" which before had been closed to research.Musical FormsFugue—A composition where the day morning decided the cases of Frank Jenkins, Harry Hunter, Nelson Walters and Harry Fletcher, pending on habeas corpus proceedings, instituted by each, separately,

asking to be released on the ground
that they were illegally deprived of their liberty.These four applicants were found guilty of illegal possession of intoxicating liquor by Mayor Fitzpatrick under the state law, known as the Crabbe act, and each was fined and in default was committed to the county jail until the fine and costs
were paid.Judge Adkins in deciding said proceedings followed the case of Ed.
Tunney against the State, which was recently decided by Chief Justice William H. Taft of the supreme court of the United States, in which the court held that that part of the Crabbe act which confers jurisdiction on mayors and justices of the peace to try and sentence offenders
of said prohibition law, was contrary to the Fifth and Fourteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States for the reason that it was restraining the liberties of the accused without "due process of law."The court found that the guaranty of "due process of law" as provided in the constitution was violated by reason of mayors and justices of the peace receiving their costs in the cases on conviction of the accused.
The same decision was also reached by Judge Houck of the appellate court of the Fifth Judicial district sitting in Perry county.There seems to be no other alternative but to release persons who have been imprisoned for violations of the Crabbe act when their cases have been heard by mayors and justices of the peace since the highest court in the land has decided such courts are without jurisdiction in such cases as being in violation of the constitution of the United States.The prisoners were represented by Tom A. Renick and George G. Adkins and the State by E. A. Brown, prosecuting attorney and the mayor
was represented by C. A. Weldon, city solicitor.New Idea in PolygamyOne generally associates polygamy

is a mountainous land situated almost

It is the true home of the Tuareg, a

the Numidians. . . . The country covers a vast area and is traversed
by a mountain range, attaining a height of 11,000 feet. The Tuaregs wear veils, that is, the men do. The

BIT OF WIRE DISCOURAGES CORN BORERS

Simple Device Helps Greatly in Plowing Trash Under Ohio Farmers Find.

A quarter's worth of wire attached to a sulky plow will do wonders in discouraging the European corn borer, farmers in borer-infested counties of Ohio are now discovering. And for plowing under trash in general, where the desire is for a clean job of plowing, whether or not the corn borer is aimed at, wires attached to the plow will do the job efficiently, according to agricultural engineers plowing demonstrations in the corn borer area under the guidance of the agricultural college extension service of the Ohio State university.

For a wheeled plow the engineers suggest, in heavy trash three wires may be used to each bottom. Select No. 9, soft wire and cut it into 10 or 12-foot lengths.

Attach one wire to the shank or stem of the rolling coulter at a point as low as possible. Another may be placed on the plow ahead of the first wire, and slightly higher. A third wire can go back of the first wire that on the shank of the coulter, and as low as possible. All of these wires, should drag under the furrow slice.

Should the stalks be heavy and hard to pull down on the top of the furrow slice increase the length of wire for this will put more tension in the wire. Increasing the length is better than attaching a weight to the end of the wire.

Wide-bottom plows do best in covering trash, the engineers have found, because they turn the furrow slice over more completely. Coulters and jointers help materially. A sharp share is another essential.

Chinese Chef Master of Art, Says Writer

On the whole, well-cooked Chinese food is unsurpassable, writes Genevieve Wimsatt in "A Griffin in China," and the occidental gourmand who overcomes his prejudices and eats the food of China for even a short period of time, finds that ever afterward all other cooking seems flat, tame and savorless to him. In Paris or Vienna or New Orleans, wherever he may dine, as long as he lives he will hunger for the oil-roasted duck of Peking, of which only the crisp, amber-brown skin is served, cut into bits, spread on paper-thin pancakes, rolled into a cylinder along with a bit of green vegetable and a thick brown sauce, and eaten from the hand like a sandwich; and whenever he sits down to fish he will compare it, unfavorably, with the fish of China, boiled in wine, blanketed with gravy sauce, salt and tart and sweet, and flavored with fresh ginger.

How to aid others to bear pain: Well, sympathy helps a little.

The average man meets temptation about three-fourths of the way.

A dog is generally a gentleman. He considers your likes and dislikes.

Many a man has been robbed by his friends while watching his enemies.

Make the best of your surroundings. The duck pond is an ocean to the tadpole.

STYLES IN CROOKS' WEAPONS CHANGE

Carefully Selected Pistol Is Now Favorite.

New York.—The weapon would have appealed to anyone with a liking for firearms; its long blue barrel looked grim and forbidding, and though its curved butt was inlaid with ivory there was nothing suggestive of a toy about it. On the contrary, this pistol, well oiled and polished, gave the impression that it was ready at all times for action.

A stroke of good fortune had landed both weapon and owner in the hands of the police. A detective carefully extracted the bullets from the chamber, counted them and placed them in an envelope for future reference. He remarked that from his observations the pistol is today the favorite weapon of the crook.

The criminal selects his weapon with great care and does not hesitate to pay a good price for it. Indeed, he seldom buys a cheap weapon; most of the firearms which the police have seized and confiscated are in first-class working condition. The crook usually carries a .32 or a .38, though occasionally he totes a .45. However, as a rule he finds this caliber of pistol too large and unwieldy for his purpose. He prefers a smaller weapon since it is easier to conceal.

"Crooks," said a detective, "use a great variety of weapons. Just as a shoemaker is known by his last a thief is known by the instruments he carries. You can usually tell by a crook's weapon what particular line of criminality he follows. A decade ago crooks used a great many more kinds of weapons than they do now. The average criminal is content with a single weapon.

Pistol the Favorite.
"A large percentage of criminals have discarded other weapons solely for the pistol.

"When hold-ups were quite common detectives intercepted three robbers as they ran from a store. One of them had a formidable magazine gun. He had cut off the rounded points of the bullets and had flattened them out, obviously with the intention of plowing a big hole in the anatomy of a victim he might feel inclined to shoot. The incident suffices to show the callousness and cruelty of the average criminal and how little he cares for human life.

"There are plenty of men in the department today who can recall the time when gun-toting criminals were much more the exception than the rule. Indeed, there were any number of professional crooks who never used firearms in their business. They used other weapons which answered their purpose better, and some of their favorite weapons are seldom seen or heard of now.

"The club was a primitive weapon and was superseded by the sandbag, which worked effectively and left few marks. A short piece of rubber hose was used for the same purpose. The sandbag is out of date, but occasionally crops up.

"The sandbag was discarded for the blackjack. A blow from a loaded blackjack will put anyone quickly to sleep. Akin to the blackjack are brass knuckles, and frequently a victim is unable to say whether he has been hit by one or the other. Both of them are occasionally used today by thugs. They are regarded as deadly weapons and it is as serious an offense to have them in one's possession as a pistol.

"A few years ago a long, sharp-bladed knife or a dagger vied with the pistol in popularity. Indeed, there were far more stabbing affrays than shootings that came under the notice of the police. The wielder of dagger or knife often used these instruments with deadly effect, and occasionally some one would be stabbed to death. In recent years there has been a big falling off in such crimes and instead of being stabbed people are now shot.

Gunman a Weakling.
"The gun-toting criminal is a recent product. He attained his full prominence a few years ago when crime was rampant. He is a different product from the old-type criminal who was strong and robust and did not need a gun. The present-day gunmen are invariably puny, undersized men, and are weak mentally as well as physically. You see innumerable examples of them as they dribble into station houses; and they are all alike—sallow, frail, undersized, the sickest-looking lot of criminals the world ever saw.

"They are only daring when they are under the spell of narcotics. A large number of criminals are confirmed drug addicts, and in order to keep themselves supplied with drugs they will often take a desperate chance. Some of these criminal addicts spend $5 to $25 a day on drugs. A good many crooks who hold up drug stores do so to get narcotics. It is common for one of them to demand narcotics of a druggist. If they are unable to get their favorite drug they will hold up a store to get money with which to purchase drugs.

"It is seldom criminals get drunk when they have serious work to do. They realize that a drunken hold-up man would not get very far. He would be slow in action and liable to queer the whole works. This happened when a drunken Indian attempted to hold up a Chicago hotel."

Divorces Increase
London.—Divorces are increasing because newspapers are now forbidden to print the details.

AMUSEMENTS

If ever a picture deserved the adjective studious—Frank Lloyd's "The Eagle of the Sea" which opened at the Met theater last night, is it! After sitting thru eight reels of romance, thrills, smiles and tears, this writer is convinced that the film is worth every cent of the great fortune Paramount must have poured into its making.

Altho of a spectacular nature, "The Eagle of the Sea" cannot be classified as such. Romantic, it is more than a romance. Altho historical, thrilling and adventurous, it cannot be tabulated as any of these. It is all of the above woven together with a deftness of which only Frank Lloyd is capable.

The story, that of the most adventurous body of men ever gathered—weather-beaten buccannars of the Spanish Main—is pictured so accurately that as one views it he wonders whether the spirits of those old sea-dogs didn't come to life while the picture was being made.

The plot's action hinges on Jean Lafitte, terror of the Mexican Gulf, who because he aided General Jackson in the battle of New Orleans, was pardoned for his depredations as a pirate. Learning of a scheme to involve England and the United States in war, he resumes his searoving to capture the plotters. A terrific battle takes place in which Jean violates his parole and defeats his enemies.

Florence Vidor and Ricardo Cortez, the two featured players, deserve particular praise. As the toast of New Orleans, Miss Vidor has the best role of her career. Cortez, the dashy devil-may-care pirate, sweeps you off your feet by his audacity.

One of the best films in many months, "The Eagle of the Sea" is one picture you should not miss.

Ohio Boys Find Mummy
of an Indian Princess

Lancaster, Ohio.—A mummy believed to be that of an Indian princess, found in a forgotten cave, 100 feet above a creek bed, in a wild stretch of country near here by John and Robert Goslin, boy scouts, has been unearthed for the Ohio State archeological museum.

The discovery was classed as one of great importance by C. H. Shetrone, curator of the museum, who declared pottery and other relics found with the mummy indicated that the person was of high rank. The body was encased in a shroud of woven reeds, a part of the burial ceremony reserved only for leaders among the tribe.

Mr. Shetrone said the body probably was that of a daughter of Parhe of the Crane, chief of the Indian village which once stood on the site of Lancaster.

Our oldest and best friends we prize for their faults.

JOHN HICKMAN
APPEALS TO KING
OF BELGIUM

Condemned Slayer Seeks Aid of Monarch For Whom He Acted As Body Guard.

Chillicothe, April 16.—Because John Hickman, of Columbus, convicted of slaying Dan Garrett, a policeman, served during the World war in the body guard to King Albert of Belgium, his attorneys today appealed to the Belgian consul at Cincinnati to enlist the Belgian ruler in the condemned man's behalf.

Hickman, who was found guilty of first degree murder by a jury here, was sentenced to be electrocuted April 9, but action was stayed by the Supreme court to permit a hearing on a motion for a new trial.

Petitions asking Governor Vic Donahey to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment today were circulated in Chillicothe, Spargursville, Bourneville, Bainbridge and Floodwood.

PREDICTS BETTER
BRAND OF BASE-BALL THIS YEAR

The brand of base ball played by the major leagues this coming season will show considerable improvement over that of the past few seasons, asserts Hugh Fullerton, well known sports writer. Writing in this week's Liberty, Fullerton says:

"There is one chance that base ball in the majors may improve this season. For two years prosperity and Florida land have seemed more important to some athletes than the game, and have distracted their attention. McGraw's unfortunate real estate development hit the Giants a jolt. Bill Doak quit to amass millions; Dazzy Vance had an attack of real estate on the arm; Miller Huggins saw visions of millions and the possibility of having so much money he could tell Ruth where to get off. The real estate boom was more talked of among the athletes than base ball was. In the midst of a game some of them were figuring the turnover. Later they began worrying about whether they would get out alive.

"This year," Fullerton explains, "the old pay check is restored to its normal status and in some cases is above par. This year the boys may work for real money instead of dreaming of fortunes."

WAITERS' LINE
AN ODD SIGHT

Jobless Men Stand on Nassau Street, New York, Every Morning.

New York.—One of the oldest and oddest "sights" of New York is the "waiters' line" in Nassau street, between Ann and Fulton. The line forms every morning about 10:30.

The men who assemble in Nassau street are those who are looking for work as waiters, dishwashers, etc., in the cheaper downtown lunchrooms. Naturally, they are neither prosperous looking nor well dressed, but they are only unemployed, not "unemployables."

The block on Nassau street is their well-known and recognized rendezvous, and has been for many years. The proprietors of the eating houses which need help look for them there. It is a free, outdoor employment bureau. Sometimes there are a dozen seekers for work there, sometimes more; it depends on the state of the labor market.

Men Assemble Singly.

First one man makes his appearance and stands waiting at this curb, but it is not long before he is joined by another. They seldom come in pairs. Sometimes they talk, or read newspapers, but generally they just stand and wait. They hold their places on both sides of the street, most often in a single line, but when there are many seekers for employment the line doubles. The prospective employer appears and walks up and down the row to scrutinize the men. He selects one or more as most likely to meet his wants. The rest look hard at employer and employed, but say nothing. Probably they think, "Well, another guy's got a job for a day."

The men who land the work walk off with their new bosses. The others hang around until about twelve o'clock, in the hope of a belated job turning up, and then the line melts away, not to be formed again until the following morning. Generally the men depart one by one. There is not much comradeship among these "out of works."

Never Bothered by Police.

The police do not enforce against them the municipal ordinance on loitering on the street.

"They're looking for work and doing no harm, so why should we interfere with them?" said a policeman.

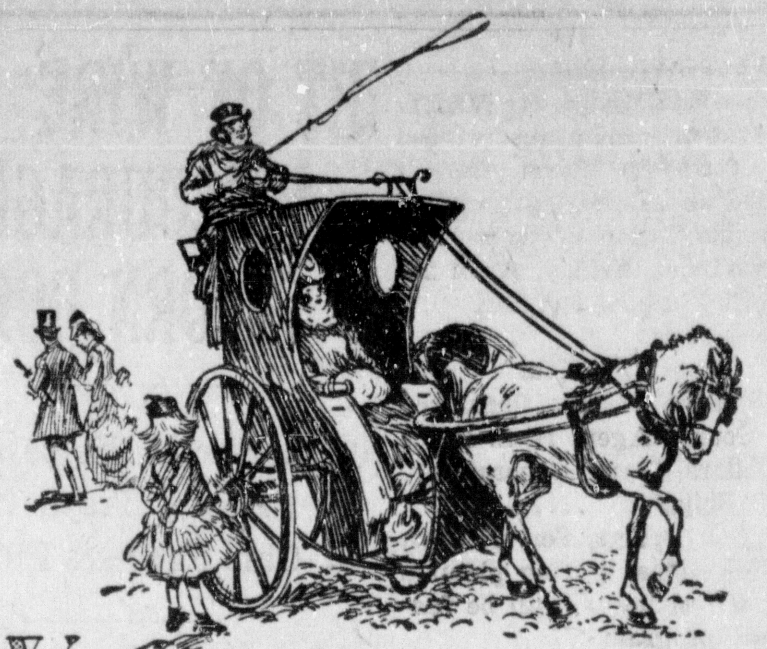

He was asked, "How long has the waiters' line been in existence?" and replied: "Search me! They were here long before my time. I've heard some of these old-timers around here say it's an old New York custom for men and the bosses to meet here in Nassau street and get together."

Boy Scouts Save
Train With Bandannas

Dover, Ohio.—Stationing themselves in front of a 25-ton bowlder which had dropped from an overhanging cliff to the tracks of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh railroad, a mile north of here, Donald Mason and his troop of ten boy scouts flagged a speeding C. & P. passenger train by waving 11 flaming-red bandannas just in time to prevent it from crashing into the huge rock.

War and Peace

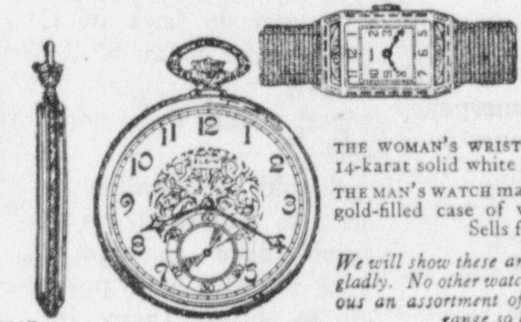

Peace is the happy, natural state of man; war his corruption, his disgrace.—Thomson.

WAS THE WATCH YOU CARRY
NEW...WHEN HANSOMS RULED
THE STREETS?

A watch may never lose a second yet be many years slow

The owner of such a watch may never miss a train or an appointment but it is the one false note in his modern makeup, probably the only thing he has that stamps him as a bit old-fashioned, a trifle behind the times. And yet a new and modish Elgin can be had at a moderate sum. Slipped into your pocket, or strapped on your wrist, it will win and hold your affection as no other watch possibly can. For Elgin is conceded to be the world's standard for watch integrity.

FARM FIRES

Farm fire loss in the United States has reached the alarming annual sum of $150,000,000. The difficulty of protecting farms with city apparatus, and the general apathy of farmers toward helping prevent fires is largely responsible for this terrible loss. A few fire prevention practices on the farm would make farming more profitable.

"Farmers should supply themselves with chemical extinguishers, water buckets, ladders, and other equipment to protect themselves from the ravages of fire," says the Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, "Jefferson County Union."

Workers and Machinery

"The remarkable efficiency of the American industrial worker is due largely to the heavy investment in labor-saving machinery that has been made to aid him," C. D. Morris of the Western Railways' Committee on Public Relations told members of the Winnetka (Ill.) Rotary club. "Behind every industrial worker in the United States there is an average investment of $4,000, and behind every rail worker in the country there is a $12,000 average investment."

No man is a failure if he is able to learn from his misfortunes.

The Lunch Room Girl

(Copyright.)

MRS. DAVENPORT DAWKINS, as
president of the City Improvement society of the flourishing town
of Benton, felt it incumbent upon her
to right every civic wrong that was brought to her attention. And sometimes she sought out wrongs that
were not brought to her attention.
She had watched the workmen going
past her house to the Granger factory
and had noticed with increasing concern the fact that they all carried
lunch boxes. The thought of all these
poor men eating cold lunches troubled
her. She did not reflect that most of
of the boxes were supplied with
vacuum bottles containing hot tea
or coffee. As she thought the matter
over it became to her a burning
shame that Mr. Granger with all his
millions should force his men to eat
cold lunches.

"I don't see how he forces them,"
said the vice president of the C. I. S.
when Mrs. Dawkins drew her attention to the "burning shame."
"He ought to have a lunch room in
the plant," said Mrs. Dawkins.

"Well, I'll bet you a new hat you
can't get Mr. Granger to do anything of
the sort," said the vice president.
"None of the Grangers have been any
too philanthropic and from all I can hear young Larry Granger, who man-
ages the place since his father's death,
is a chip off the old block."

"I'll bet I can—one way or another,"
said the indomitable Mrs. Dawkins.

So Mrs. Dawkins wrote to a niece
of hers who had taken a course in
lunch room management as part of
her college course in domestic economy. Then she met her niece in the
big city fifty miles away and talked
the matter over with her.

So Polly Proctor, who was becoming a little weary of the life of idleness
she had lived during the two years
since her graduation, donned an
inexpensive little blue serge frock
and went to call on Mr. Granger. She
told him that she had heard that he
had a large corps of workmen who
had to eat cold lunches and that she would be very glad to advise him concerning the installing of an up-to-date
lunch room in his factory. She would
furthermore like the job of directing
the lunch room after it started.

Mrs. Dawkins heard with deep
gratitude that Mr. Granger had seen
his civic duty and had given orders
for the installation of an up-to-date
lunch room in his plant. Not wanting to let Mr. Granger know that Mrs.
Dawkins had been promoter of the
scheme, Polly did not go to live with
her aunt, but took a room in a board-
ing house and ate three meals a day
in her own lunch room.

Mrs. Dawkins did not know that
Mr. Granger often found it convenient
to wait until he came to the factory
to have his breakfast and that then
he sat with Polly in the lunch room
kitchen leisurely drinking coffee and
eating muffins or griddle cakes which Polly had made. Sometimes, too, he
dropped in at half past five to join
Polly in the light supper that she ate
there before leaving the factory for
the night.

Then one day Mrs. Granger was surprised to see an expensive car
draw up before her house and to
see her niece Polly and a tall young
man jump out and come hurrying up
to the door. A few minutes later she
met her niece and the young man in
her drawing room, and she knew that
it was Harry Granger. "I had to tell
Harry that you were my aunt," said
Polly. "We came to tell you the news.
We're engaged—Isn't it wonderful?"

It was indeed unquestionably wonderful to Mrs. Dawkins for the Granger millions were said to be numerous. Mrs. Dawkins instantly took
upon herself the credit of the match.
At least if it hadn't been for her Polly
never would have met Mr. Granger.

"Now I suppose you'll have to get
another girl to run the lunch room,
that is, if you are going to be married
soon," she said.

Harry Granger laughed and so did
Polly.

"I don't believe that we'll bother
with the lunch room any longer," said
Harry Granger. "You see only two
or three of the men ever eat there.
Outsiders are allowed in and it's been
crowded for the most part with office
workers in the neighborhood who take
advantage of the low prices and the
good cooking. The factory men don't like it—they even resent it a little.
They'd rather drink their rank coffee
out of a vacuum bottle and munch
a hunky meat sandwich out of a box
sitting on a plank out in the factory
yard than eat what we call whole-
some food at a civilized table in an
up-to-date lunch room. It wasn't Polly's fault though—I knew from the
start that as far as the factory men
went the lunch room idea was no
good."

"Then why in the world did you
spend all the money to have one installed? asked the dumbfounded Mrs.
Dawkins.
"Well," said Harry deliberately, "I
figured right from the start that Polly
was the girl I wanted to marry. And I thought that if I said 'Yes' to her
then she would say 'Yes' to me later
on. But that lunch room was worth
while. We've had some cozy little
suppers together in the kitchen there,
haven't we?"

And as Polly and Harry exchanged
a look of perfect understanding, Mrs.
Dawkins dropped back in her chair
and murmured "I'm blessed."

WOOL GROWERS COOPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

Handled Over Four Million
Pounds Last Year—First
of New Clip Coming in.

Wool growers of Ohio, interested
in cooperative merchandizing of their
product, are bending their efforts to
secure an additional million pounds
of wool for sale thru the pool this
year, according to word just received
by the County Farm bureau from
headquarters of the Wool Growers
Cooperative association. Last year
the total handled by the cooperative
amounted to more than 4,000,000
pounds. Of this amount 19,303
pounds were sent by 68 consigners
from this county. J. A. Dinsmore has
been named wool leader of the movement to increase the amount going to
the pool from this county.

The Ohio pool, started in 1918,
now has the largest membership of
any wool cooperative in the country
and stands second to only one western association in the number of
pounds consigned to it. About 10,- 000 growers, the great majority of
them on farms, were served thru
the organization last year. Indiana
and Michigan wools were also handled by the Ohio cooperative in considerable quantities.

First wools of the 1927 clip are already being received at the Columbus warehouse, according to R. A.
Hammond, warehouse manager and
treasurer of the association. Approximately 3,000,000 pounds of
wool are already under contract to
the association, and campaigns for
new members now going forward are
expected to add to this amount.
